

Components of the Conclusion

1. Restate Your Thesis: You want your audience to know exactly where you stand on this issue, and restating your thesis in the conclusion serves this purpose. You should not repeat your thesis word for word, but the overall message should remain the same.
2. Summary of Your Points: Remind readers exactly why they should adopt your line of thinking. Remember, this is just a quick summary. Be careful not to repeat your entire essay in the conclusion.
3. Personal Comment or Call to Action: This is usually the last sentence in the essay. You need to tie up your views with a strong thought. Implying readers to take action with explicit suggestions encourages them to campaign for your cause.
